ACADEMICS AT AUBURN

Auburn University is a public, four-year, research institution.

Common first-year student challenges include...

- Average class size for most core courses
- Academic expectations of Auburn University students
- Time spent studying or utilizing academic resources

ACADEMIC SUPPORT RESOURCES

There are high expectations for students, but there are resources on campus to help students meet this challenge!

When connecting with Academic Support, remember...

- All enrolled undergraduate students are welcome
- Use our resources early and often (proactive vs. reactive)
- We are here for any student seeking academic support

ACADEMIC COACHING

WHAT: A free personalized program where students partner with a graduate-level coach to implement action steps to achieve academic and personal goals.

WHY: Students learn strategies to improve learning habits and skills covering areas such as time management, test-taking, online learning, and more.

HOW: Schedule your Coach Consult appointment using Advise Assist (on students' AU Access page).

STUDY PARTNERS

WHAT: A free peer tutoring program for a variety of core courses. Tutoring is offered as one-on-one hour-long appointments for undergraduate students.

WHY: Students work through challenging course-specific content and grow as confident, self-directed, learners.

HOW: Schedule your peer tutoring appointment using Advise Assist (on students' AU Access page).

SUPPLEMENTAL INSTRUCTION (SI)

WHAT: Free, weekly, interactive review sessions planned by students who have successfully completed the course.

WHY: Students gain content mastery, make peer connections, and develop skills for academic success in historically difficult core classes.

HOW: If their course is supported by SI, students will receive communications from their SI Leader with dates, times, and the location for their SI sessions.

We understand!

We know that you are receiving a lot of information during Camp War Eagle.

Here are a few suggestions for connecting with Academic Support after your session...
